ABOUT THE COMPETITION

HISTORY

The Arts of Fashion Foundation Fashion Student Competition was created in December of 2001 as the American extension of the world renowned Concours International des Jeunes Createur de Mode.

This global fashion design student contest - sponsored by Air France and the French Federation of Couture, was introduced in Japan in 1982 and eventually moved to France. In 2006, Paris stopped hosting the competition, and the Arts of Fashion Foundation undertook the task of hosting this event but in the United States, with support of the YKK Corporation by 2007.

The Arts of Fashion Foundation, a public American nonprofit 501(c)(3), has continued to make this a unique and authentic annual fashion gathering for students, schools, and fashion professionals from all over the world, bringing them together to celebrate creativity in fashion.

The Foundation has evolved into an internationally recognized organization that operates without the heavy influence of commercial interest allowing room for the nurturing of the vision of these young designers. Their annual programs encourage and support creative designers by introducing industry professionals and public audiences to their unique work thus advancing the careers of visionary and risk-taking designers.

CONCEPT & SELECTION PROCESS

Each Fall, a new theme is chosen, and fashion design students are given until beginning of April to register. They are required to submit a proposal for their 'mini collection' containing sketches, materials and technical drawings of three silhouettes or accessories based on the chosen theme.

At the end of May, an international panel of judges selects 50 projects that reflect creative and innovative potential. The chosen candidates are then required to edit the collection to two looks to send to the competition.

At the end of the year, these 50 projects are reviewed by a panel of fashion industry professionals and shown on the runway for the grand finale of the Foundation's annual symposium. Seven to eight designers are awarded and receive scholarships to creative programs and internship opportunities in established fashion houses to further develop their careers.
